Air Cadet Notes

Smartly attired in their new uniforms, the local Air Cadets parade each Monday and Thursday evening at 7:30. On Monday evening last, the students of grade 12 were guests during the lecture period when a talking picture was shown on meteorology, which proved to be both interesting and educational.

The Cadets, under the leadership of Commanding Officer Reiber and Officers Wiggins and McLaughlin, have become very proficient in drill and are enthusiastically following the regulation program of the Canada Air Cadets, which includes drill, aircraft recognition, mathematics, meteorology and signalling. At present the strength of the flight is three officers and thirty-five cadets.

A considerable amount of equipment has been received from Headquarters which helps to make the course an interesting one.

At the present time there are still vacancies for any boys between the ages of 15 and 18, whether school students or not, who wish to join, and application will be taken any parade night at the public school.

Boxing Day Civic Holiday

In accordance with a by-law passed at a meeting of the Town Council on Monday evening, Saturday December 26th [Boxing Day] has been declared a Civic Holiday. All business houses in Didsbury will therefore be closed on that day.

Victory Slogan is Keynote

"Prepare for Victory - not later - but Now"

This is to be the keynote of a gigantic four-day conference on problems of Post-War Reconstruction, Hon. William Aberhart, Premier of Alberta, announced today. Following preliminary meetings to be held in Calgary on December 14 and 15, the main conference opens at the McDougall Church in Edmonton on Tuesday, December 15, and continues daily until Friday, December 18.

Visiting speakers will include Charles O. Benham, Joliet, Ill., publisher and lecturer; Mrs. L. Lund, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. M. Alison, Kern, Vancouver and Rev. Canon S. H. Middleton, of St. Paul's Indian School, Cardston.

In announcing the conference, Premier Aberhart stated that its purpose is "to discuss problems of post-war reconstruction." "It is the first step," he added, "in answering the greatest challenge in Canada's History."

Honor Judging Team At Banquet

Dorothy Bruce and Harvey Stevens, the judging team of the Didsbury and District Calf Club, who won the Alberta Championship for Dairy Cattle, and, who represented Alberta at the Junior Judging Competition at Toronto, were the guests on Friday evening, at a banquet given by the Didsbury and District Board of Trade. The members of the West Didsbury Beef Calf Club as well as the members of the Dairy Calf Club, were also guests at the banquet.

Mr. Ed Ford, President of the Board of Trade, after welcoming the guests and paying tribute to the judging team for the honor they had brought to the district by their achievement, turned the meeting over to Mr. Tom Morris, leader of the Dairy Calf Club.

Mr. Morris spoke of the pleasure he had received in working during the past year with the Club, and said he was proud of achievements of the Club as a whole, and especially of the winning team. He said he was particularly proud of the fact this team was the second to win honor of representing the province at Toronto in the few years that the Club had been organized. He mentioned the team previously winning this honor, was Tom Clarke, who is now a lieutenant with the forces overseas, and Delbert Leva-good.

The guests of honor, in happy little talks, gave a splendid outline of their trips east. Mr. Stevens told of the events leading up to winning the Alberta Championship and giving a detailed account of the judging competition, while Miss Bruce told of the entertainment they had received and the different sight-seeing tours they had enjoyed as guests of the Dominion Government. They also exhibited several mementos of the trip.

Mr. Yauch, of the Olds School of Agriculture, spoke on the benefits received by the young members of the different Junior Clubs, and Mr. Hugh McPhail, district agriculturalist, who had coached the team, spoke of the junior club work and expressed his satisfaction that one of his teams had achieved such honor.

Congratulations were also expressed by other gentlemen present.

During the evening, the Crystal Dairy Cups won at the Fair were presented to Mr. Wm. Bruce for the best dairy herd, and to Margaret Bruce for the best calf in the Dairy Calf Club Competition.

University Cattle Makes Good Showing

One championship and three top prizes on prime beef steers, bred and finished at the University of Alberta, were won at Chicago market fat stock show—wartime miniature edition of the international—according to information received Saturday by J. P. Sackville, professor of animal husbandry.

In the various weight classes of young finished beef cattle University of Alberta won first, third and championship on Aberdeen Angus steers and one second on Shorthorns. Ten head were shown, including two Herefords.

Didsbury To Have A Credit Union

Too late for press last week, it was learned that at a meeting of local people in the Hotel parlor, Wednesday evening last, it was decided that Didsbury should join the growing number of those communities which are helping themselves the Credit Union way.

Mr. C. D. Denney, Supervisor of credit unions for the province, who was present, explained that a credit union is sort of fraternal society. Each credit union is entirely a community organization, owned and operated by the people of the community.

Its two chief purposes are:

First, to encourage the regular and systematic saving by members of small sums of money which, when put together in the credit union, make a very considerable sum.

Second, to use the accumulated funds of the members to assist members in need of short term credit.

The speaker claimed that credit unions are doing a great deal to make the common man self dependent as well as to bring home to the people the need for mutual helpfulness. He pointed out that most communities possess sufficient money to take care of their short term credit needs if they will only mobilize this money for their mutual benefit.

In support of his contention, he mentioned a credit union at Lalleche in drought-ridden southern Saskatchewan, where in four and a half years time it has accumulated $47,000 of the members' savings and made loans of $180,000 to members.

Since the fall of 1938, 68 credit unions have been organized in Alberta. Their 6000 members, by saving fifty cents or a dollar or so every "pay-day", have accumulated $215,000 in assets. Loans to members in this interval amount to over $800,000. Community type credit unions are operating at Brooks, Raymond, Macleod, High River, Strathmore, St. Paul, Morinville, Wetaskiwin, Donnelly, Fahler and several other places.

Mr. W. H. MacEwen, Credit Union Examiner for the province, was also present at the meeting and took part in the discussions.

A provincial secretary and chairman of the group were elected. Officers will be elected at a general meeting as soon as a sufficient number of members have been secured.

NOTICE

All elevators in Didsbury will be closed at noon every Saturday until further notice. The elevators, however, are open Wednesday afternoons.

Say Good Bye To Air Woman

A number of friends of the Miss Vivian Caithness met at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Caithness, on Sunday evening to bid her bon-voyage and good wishes in her future career. About twenty were present and she was tendered a going-away gift by her friends.

Miss Caithness has enlisted in the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F. and left Tuesday evening for No. 7 Manning Pool at Rockcliffe, Ont.

Obituary.

DUNCAN L. MILNE

Duncan L. Milne, a pioneer of the district east of Didsbury, passed away at his home on Tuesday, December 1st, in his 64th year.

Mr. Milne was born at Sarnia, Ont., in 1877, but when about three years old, moved with his parents to North Dakota where he was educated and farmed as a young man. In 1900 he returned to Canada and lived a short time in Manitoba before coming to the Didsbury district in 1902. He homesteaded about 20 miles north-east of town, and has continuously farmed there since that time. He was highly respected by his neighbours and for fifteen years served as trustee for the Stuart School District.

In 1907 he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Owen, who mourns his loss as do also four sons, Roy, Owen, Ronald and Albert all of Didsbury, and three daughters, Mrs. Harry Coates, Mrs. Fred Pregitzer, of Didsbury and Mrs. Wm. Stuart, of Vancouver, B.C. He is also survived by two grandchildren, a brother, John, of Rioalto, California, and a sister, Mrs. E. Bjornson, of North Dakota.

Funeral services were held at Knox United Church on Saturday where a large number of old timers and friends gathered to pay their respects.

The pallbearers, all old neighbors, were Messrs John Topley, John Smith, Millar McCulloch, Malcolm, John and James Dundas.

Herb Fisher was in charge of the arrangements.

Butter Not To Be Rationed

"I cannot see the remotest possibility of butter rationing in the near future" states J. Gordon Taggart, foods administrator, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. A recent order of the Board requires that butter held in storage be reduced by November 30 by 25 percent of the stocks held on November 1 level. About 11,000,000 pounds of butter will thus be placed on the market it is expected.

The Outlook For Agriculture

WESTERN CANADA has just produced one of the largest crops in the history of this great wheat growing area. Of the 550,000,000 bushels said to have been harvested, the government has contracted to buy about 280,000,000 bushels. Because of the curtailment of world markets due to the war, much of this crop will not be moved for the present, and so far it has provided the farmers with many problems in the matters of securing help for the large scale harvesting operations, and in finding storage space for this large quantity of wheat. So far, this year's crop has not proved to be of great advantage to the farmer, but in a recent report on the agricultural situation in Canada, issued by the Bank of Nova Scotia, there are some interesting observations concerning the economic situation of the farmers now, and the outlook for agriculture in the next few months.

Cash Income Shows Increase

For Western Canada, the report predicts an increase in the farmer's cash income over that of the past year. This will be due partly to the increase in the price of wheat, and partly to expansion in the production of dairy and livestock products. For the whole of Canada, an increase of 15% over 1941 is expected in the farmer's cash income. This represents about $120,000,000, and would bring the farmers' cash income to over a billion dollars, for the first time since 1928. Higher cost of farm labor, and a higher price level for feed, offsets some of the advantage of this increased income. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports an advance of more than 20% in the wages of day labor since 1941, and an advance of 30% in monthly wages in the same period. The total output for the farmer was not as great as the figures might indicate, however, since much less labor was hired at the higher wage rate. Labor conditions are considered to be at present unfavorable to the farmers. Figures recently issued by the Bank of Canada show that the supply of farm labor has decreased by 20% since the war began, and by 9% in the past year. This situation has been relieved somewhat by the recruiting of harvest help from the cities, and by women assuming a greater amount of farm work. There has been noted too, an increase in the amount of machinery purchased by farmers. In 1941 over $2,000,000 worth of machinery was purchased in excess of the amount purchased in 1940. Of this, $1,000,000 was for dairy equipment.

A Shortage Of Skilled Labor

In spite of all this there is a serious shortage of skilled farm labor, and it is hoped that possibly this situation may shortly be rectified through the operation of Selective Service. In summing up, the report states that with the recent adjustment of beef and bacon prices, and "the higher and better balanced price structure which has been established for dairy products," the period in adjustment of farm products may now be over, and the new prices may prove incentives for greater production. The facts given in the report show clearly the very important part agriculture is playing in the war effort, and the way in which production is being carried on despite the labor shortage. The demands of the home market have increased greatly in the past months, yet acute shortages of farm products have been averted. At the same time contracts of unprecedented size are being fulfilled for Britain and for the armed forces here and abroad. In maintaining production on this scale, the agricultural industry is indeed playing a major role in the winning of the war.

Non-Essential Foods In The Diet

The luncheon or supper meal can be a very attractive one, full of the necessary food elements, if the proper care is exercised in preparation and planning beforehand. Too many people serve the usual slab of cold meat and potato salad without any attempt whatsoever to make this meal appetizing, wholesome and well-balanced.

Children coming home after school is out, there appetites fairly shouting for plenty of good, wholesome food, should be served a meal which will restore the energies they have expended and build firm, healthy bones and tissue. Sausages and fried potatoes followed by doughnuts and jam for a filler may sound rather nice to the average child, but, though expensive foods, they do not contain nearly enough vitamins and minerals so necessary to the growing body. So much fried food, too, is difficult to digest.

Following are two types of lunches. A comparison will show at once what is meant.

HIGH VALUE LUNCH

Baked Lima Beans
Toasted Whole Wheat Cheese
Sandwich
Carrot and Celery Salad
Apples or Applesauce and Cream
Milk

LOW VALUE LUNCH

Fried Sausage and Potatoes
Stewed Tomatoes
White Bread and Butter
Doughnuts and Jam
Tea

The high value lunch shows imagination in planning, is nicely balanced, with no preponderance of any one type of food as in the low value lunch, and consists of food containing the essential vitamins and minerals. The children, too, will enjoy this kind of meal much more.

Woman Paper-Hanger

Seventy-Year-Old Ontario Woman Proud Of Her Trade

The war-time girl has proven herself capable of handling many jobs supposed to be for men only, but 70-year-old Mrs. Edward Newton, of Herring's Mills, Ont., has been hanging paper and painting houses for the last 30 years and is proud of her trade. Says Mrs. Newton, "I find the work just as easy now as I ever did and expect to carry on indefinitely." Mrs. Newton started as a professional paperhanger and painter 30 years ago when she married and until the death of her husband three years ago, she was his assistant. After Mr. Newton's death she continued with the business and almost any day may be seen atop a ladder painting or deftly hanging paper.

Problem Will Remain

Youth Of Germany Has Been Steeped In Nazi Doctrine

Anthony Eden is the latest to call attention to the problem of Germany in any post-war settlement. "One problem," he said, "we shall have to face—the most sinister of all—is Germany. Hitler isn't an accident. He is a symptom. Let none forget that in kind and generous moments after the war." Mr. Eden said the problem of Germany would remain "because Hitler inculcated his terrible doctrine into the young people of Germany."

Medical Science Has Warned Of The Dangers To Health From Improperly Cooking Of Pork

MORE than 2,000 years ago, the Children of Israel, in their wanderings in search of the promised land, made Moses their leader and endowed him with the portfolio of Minister of Public Health. In this latter capacity he naturally paid considerable attention to the matter of pure food. One of his regulations read as follows: "And the swine is unclean to you. Of their flesh shall ye not eat, and their carcass shall ye not touch."

Moses undoubtedly had some very good reason for formulating such a law, and it is altogether likely that he had noticed that serious illness occasionally followed the ingestion of pork as food. Moses' judgment in this matter was backed up, centuries later, when Mohammed forbade the use of pork as a food to his followers.

As a result of this, many millions of people, if they adhere strictly to the tenets of their religious belief, are spared the disagreeable experience of contracting a disease known as trichinosis, which, over the centuries, must have been common, but which was first recognized, about one hundred years ago, as a disease which resulted from eating pork which had become infested with a worm-like parasite: Trichinella Spiralis.

In the year 1835, Sir James Paget, a famous English surgeon, was making a post mortem examination, when he noticed that numerous small, calcareous nodules in the muscles were taking the edge off his knife. He was sufficiently curious to take out some of these nodules and show them to his friend, Robert Owen, of the Royal College of Surgeons at London.

Owen broke open some of these small shell-like nodules and looked at them with his microscope. To his amazement he found that inside each shell-like nodule, not so big as a grain of wheat, was a small, coiled up worm, hair-like in size and consistency. He gave it the name "Trichina Spiralis," which really means "little hair of a spiral shape."

Today we call this parasite "Trichinella Spiralis" which means practically the same thing. We know that "Trichinella Spiralis" is a very small worm which is a parasite of the pig, and which, when eaten alive by a human being (as it may be, when uncooked or partially cooked pork is eaten) becomes a parasite of the human being, and causes a disagreeable and occasionally fatal illness known as trichinosis. But we did not know this before a hundred years ago, and, of course, neither Moses nor Mohammed could have known that this parasite was the reason why the flesh of the swine seemed at times to cause illness.

In 1842, Doctor Bowditch of Boston, was the first to report a case of trichinosis in America. In 1860, Doctor Zenker of Dresden, described the disease as it occurred in Germany. With characteristic thoroughness, the Government of Prussia built up a system of inspection of pork in abattoirs and slaughterhouses which in 1895 required the services of 27,000 persons.

But even this did not stamp out trichinosis in Prussia, because not all the citizens could be persuaded to thoroughly cook their sausage or other pork products, and thorough cooking of all pork eaten is the only really reliable way to get rid of the disease.

The only safe Trichinella Spiralis is the cooked one.

The parasite is a small round worm. The pig is the animal most commonly infected, although rats and bears which eat infected pork may also become infected. The young worm or larva, as it is called, is very small and bores through the wall of the pig's bowel and gets into its muscles. In the muscles of the pig these small larvae surround themselves with a sac which after perhaps a year, becomes calcified and forms the hard small nodules which Sir James Paget noticed in 1835.

But most pigs are killed for pork by the time they are six months old, so the larvae remain alive in their little sacs or cysts in the muscles. If some of the pork, which contains these larvae, is then eaten in a partially cooked or uncooked state by a human being, the sacs digest away in the stomach and the live larvae escape into the bowel where they grow to adult size, the male 1-17 inch long and the female 1-7 inch long (or two and a half times as long).

Each female produces from 1,000 to 15,000 larvae in the bowel. Most of these get into the blood vessels and are carried round to all parts of the body, settling in the muscles, particularly the tongue, the diaphragm and the eye muscles.

The adult worms in the bowel die in a few weeks and pass out, but not before thousands and thousands of the larvae, or young, escape into the muscles and settle down there. Here they surround themselves with sacs and eventually become calcified and, in the course of time, they die leaving behind them thousands of minute stony lumps in the muscles, which can be shown up by X-ray.

At the time when these thousands of larvae are getting into the muscles the patient becomes ill. He has a fever and his muscles are sore. His eyes become puffy, due to the presence of the larvae in the eye muscles. He may be sick at the stomach and may have cramps. His white blood cells increase in number and one type called the "Eosinophile" is greatly increased in number. These symptoms set in about two to three weeks after eating the infected pork, and last usually from three to seven days. Death occasionally occurs.

The pig gets infected by eating the uncooked flesh of a pig (pork clippings in garbage), of a rat (which has eaten infected pork clippings) or of a bear (if he has eaten infected pork clippings and is infected).

All three will, on occasion, feed on garbage. Hence the care taken to see that hogs are not fed on untreated garbage, and that rats are kept away from piggeries, abattoirs and packing houses. But since the pig, when he does get infected, has thousands of these larvae all through of any practical method of meat in-

A Successful Health Programme For All Parts Of The Dominion Declared A National Necessity

(By Dr. Gordon Bates, General Director, Health League Of Canada, in current issue of Health)

IT has taken the present war to make current the term, isolationism. This phrase expresses an attitude, however, which is not new—the point of view of the selfish, the ignorant and the self-sufficient. Even before the parable of the Good Samaritan was written there were those who passed by on the other side because they were indifferent to the needs of others. "I and my wife, John and John's wife, we four and no more," was a sufficient text for many families. Too many people were not only indifferent to the difficulties of others but unaware of the fact that all of us depend each on the other and that the woes of one are the woes of all.

Canada's Official Food Rules

You Must Eat Right To Feel Right!

These are the health protective foods. Be sure you eat them every day in at least these amounts. (Use more if you can).

MILK—Adults—½ pint. Children—more than 1 pint. And some CHEESE, as available.

FRUITS—One serving of tomatoes daily, or of a citrus fruit, or of tomato or citrus fruit juices, and one serving of other fruits, fresh, canned or dried.

VEGETABLES (In addition to potatoes of which you need one serving daily)—Two servings daily of vegetables, preferably leafy green, or yellow, and frequently raw.

CEREALS and BREAD—One serving of a whole-grain cereal and 4 to 6 slices of Canada Approved Bread, brown or white.

MEAT, FISH, etc.—One serving a day of meat, fish, or meat substitutes. Liver, heart or kidney once a week.

EGGS—At least 3 or 4 eggs weekly.

Eat these foods first, then add to these any other foods you wish. Some source of Vitamin D such as fish liver oils, is essential for children, and may be advisable for adults.

WHAT HE LEARNED

Farmer (after the land army volunteer had milked his first cow): "Well, you learned something new today."

Volunteer—"Yes; I learned that the man who says a cow gives milk is a liar."

"Am I my brother's keeper?" cried Cain. Of course for better, for worse, we are all our brother's keepers from now on and forever else shall the mark of Cain be on our foreheads. Thus has the isolationist in politics branded himself in the eyes of his fellow man.

Isolationism in public health is as foolish and short sighted as in the field of politics. Isolationism in public health might otherwise be called parochialism. It is expressed by the self-satisfied people who say, "We have a good local health department and a good community chest and a good council of social agencies. We care not how our fellow citizens in the rest of the country, or province or Dominion fare. Their fate is nothing to us. Their disease is limited to them by a higher power. Not only are their mistakes and shortcomings none of our business, but if they do fail it can do no harm to us."

But the trouble is that it can. A selfish, narrow attitude is not only unneighbourly to our neighbours but dangerous to ourselves. The slum in which there is a high death rate because conditions breed disease which maims and kills poor children, nurtures infection which will kill rich children, too; and so disease will spread from neglected areas to areas in which the health machinery seems to be perfect and perhaps is perfect except that the community takes too little interest in the health of the province or the nation of which it forms a part.

It is pointed out that health conservation for Canada is a problem which demands attention not only in some parts of Canada but in all parts of the Dominion—especially, however, in those areas where the development of good health machinery may lead to seeming self-satisfaction. The neglected area therefore is likely to listen to the doctrine of national health because it knows that it has been neglected. The protected area which is perhaps a rich and powerful area may fail to pull its weight in a movement for the good of all, and the movement towards national health is for the good of every community in Canada, even for the wealthiest areas with the best health machinery.

It is not only that communicable diseases may spread from one community to another. There is another fact of which too few lay people are aware: that the cost of unnecessary disease is borne largely not by the people who are careless and who allow it to develop in their own neighborhood, but by the wealthy community who pay most of the taxes, but who also pay the public loss route, via indirect taxation. A typical example is found in the upkeep of provincial institutions for the care of defectives of one kind or another, or the cost of chronic disease which may originate anywhere but which ultimately becomes to a degree a charge on the whole community.

Of course, most of us have been guilty of neglecting the problem of health as a national objective. It has been a fault in our conception of patriotism. Patriotism is not at level only of the soil which gave us birth but a love of our fellow citizens, all of them. It was a good soul who said: "Above all is humanity." And isolationism is the antithesis of humanitarianism. A successful national health programme ensuring health for all parts of Canada and all Canadians would mean the triumph of humanitarianism over isolationism in public health, and this must come as people understand that the movement for national health stands for.

Former Drummer Boy Inspects "Little Black Devils"

The Royal Winnipeg Rifles or "The Little Black Devils" as the original regiment was called by the Indians during the Riel Rebellion welcomed their former drummer boy, W. A. Buchanan, now a chartered accountant in Portsmouth, Eng., when he inspected the overseas battalion during a recent regimental field day. Upper left shows him examining a regimental drum held by Corporal G. R. Palmer of Winnipeg while upper right shows him during his drummer boy days in Canada prior to going to England to reside. The citation under the photograph reads: "Willie Buchanan (W. A. Buchanan, now residing in Southsea, Eng.) drummer boy of the 90th Regt. Winnipeg Rifles, mentioned in the dispatches of Major-General Sir Frederick D. Middleton, K.C., M.G., C.B., as having at the battle of Fish Creek North West Territories, Canada, 24th April, 1885 made himself particularly useful in carrying ammunition to the right front. This he did with peculiar nonchalance, walking calmly about crying, 'Now boys! Who's for ammunition?' The lower photograph shows him taking the salute as the present overseas battalion marches past in review. With him are Maj.-Gen. the Hon. P. J. Montague, Brig. H. D. Graham and Maj.-Gen. R. Keller.

The World of Wheat

by H. G. L. Strange

WHEAT AND PIGS

On all sides farmers are advised to use more wheat for feeding pigs. At present prices, wheat is a cheap feed, too. Wheat, however, will not be used as much as it should be if pigs are lost, and far too high a percentage of young pigs are lost at farrowing time.

Newborn pigs can be saved with proper care. The sow should have a small nest of straw or hay. If a little straw, hay or chaff is provided, the sow will make it herself. The nest should be preferably in the centre of a horse or cow stall, not at the sides, for fear the sow will overlay her litter.

After birth, the new little pigs must be kept warm. It is a good thing to place them in an old blanket in a box as quickly as they are farrowed until the whole farrowing is complete. If it is very cold, take the box to a warm place for a while, until the little pigs are dried off. They can then be returned to the sow nice and warm when they will suckle readily. This means that the farmer should be present at farrowing time in cold weather.

Those who are not expert in managing pigs in cold weather should write to the Animal Husbandry Department of their nearest University.

Following factors have tended to decrease supply and increase demand: U.S.A. wheat production program for 1943 calls for between 95 and 98 percent of the actual 1942 output—Crops in the Danube Basin have been very poor this season—There has been a sharp reduction in the acreage sown to winter wheat in Canada this year.

Following factors have tended to increase supply and decrease demand: Normal wheat yields are expected in Argentina where weather conditions are favorable—The North African 1943 wheat crops will now be available to the United Nations—The Ministry of Agriculture plans to increase Northern Ireland's wheat acreage by four times the present acreage.

No Permit Needed To Slaughter Poultry

Slaughtering livestock for sale of meat has been put under a permit system by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Firms or individuals who slaughter cattle, calves, hogs, sheep or lambs for the sale of meat or have this done for them, must obtain a permit from the nearest office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, by the end of the year.

A permit is not required to slaughter poultry, or for the slaughter of livestock when the farmer's household intends to use the meat, whether the farmer does it himself or has someone else do it for him.

The purpose of the ruling is to give the Food Administration of the Board an overall picture of the source of meat supplies for sale in Canada, and a control on by-products, such as fats and hides.

Every person or firm applying for a permit will receive a temporary permit and after review of the Food Administration at Ottawa, other permits will be issued in each case justified.

Burnside Notes

Mrs. Joe Clarke was a Calgary visitor for several days last week.

Mrs. Ruth Eckel and Miss Claire Woods spent the weekend with Mrs. B. A. Woods and family.

The annual meeting of the Lone Pine W.I. was held at the Hall on Friday, December 4th. Mrs. G. Huggard won the 10c draw and Mrs. F. Ahlgrim the war saving certificate for December. The annual Christmas exchange took place. The secretary reported two ditty bags filled and sent. A hearty vote of thanks was given the retiring officers, the Mrs. Chas. Mardon, president, and the secretary, Mrs. Ruth Eckel. The annual reports were read and adopted. Officers elected for the year are as follows: President, Mrs. Floyd Ahlgrim; 1st Vice-Pres., Mrs. A. Jenkins; Sec. Treas., Mrs. Otto Faas; Directors, Mrs. J. Clark, Mrs. B. Pross, Mrs. B. Woods. Auditor, Miss S. Zook.

The draw for the Sunshine Club took place. The January meeting will be held at the home of the new President on the second Thursday in January.

Miss Marjorie Pross and Miss Thelma Brandon spent the early part of last week with the former's sister Mrs. Ted Bolten at Westerdale.

Last Friday evening about forty friends and members of the W.I. gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Pross to tender a farewell party to Mrs. Ruth Eckel who has moved to Didsbury to make her home. After a program of games and cards, Mrs. Joe Clarke, on behalf of the company, expressed her regret at the loss of a good neighbor and willing worker in the various organizations in the district, and presented the guest of honor with a beautiful leather handbag and pair of kid gloves. In reply Mrs. Eckel said she had enjoyed her life in such a good neighborhood and was glad to know she was still near enough to see her old friends and neighbors and thanked them one and all for their past kindnesses and their gifts. The singing of "For she's a jolly good fellow" brought a pleasant evening to a close.

TRAINING EMPIRE PILOTS FOR THOSEVictory - Deciding Seconds

WHEN INSTINCT MUST TAKE COMMAND !

Here is a Link Trainer, opened, showing a student pilot being instructed in what to do and how to do it

In the tense moments of a dogfight when earth and sky flash by repeatedly in a dizzy kaleidoscope, action is too fast for thinking. Instinct must take command. But for Victory, that instinct must be trained to do the right thing in the right way. Such training is given under the Commonwealth Air Training Plan through a machine called the Link Trainer.

This machine reproduces almost every possible flying condition. In absolute safety it puts future pilots through almost every flying manoeuvre. Eager Crusaders of the Skies are trained to meet instantly the unexpected . . . and meet it correctly in those fractions of a second when even Destiny pauses.

Link Trainers have more than a score of delicate, sensitive instruments that record and chart every motion of the machine. These instruments are electrically operated. And in many of the Commonwealth Air Training Centres throughout Alberta the electrical energy for such vital work is supplied by this Company --- reliable, dependable power on duty 24 hours a day and every day.

Electricity is Helping to Give the Victory Impetus to the Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Rugby Notes

The Rugby "Victory Group" met at the home of Mrs. A. Melnnis, December 1st, with nine members present. Quilt blocks were made followed by the business meeting. It was decided to send cigarettes to prisoners of war from Didsbury. The next meeting is December 17, at Mrs. L. Krebs. This will be our annual business meeting and all members are requested to be present.

The December meeting of the W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. Wahl with an attendance of seven. The financial report showed a healthy balance on the right side of the ledger and a clear sheet with which to start the new year.

Donations are being forwarded to Woods Children's Home, and the Queen's Canadian Fund

Next month the first lesson of the short course on "Foods Nutrition and Health" will be taken up by Mrs. A. Shannon.

The January meeting will be held at the home of the Secretary, when the year's program will be mapped out, and an Apron Contest is to be held also.

Prices Board Relents On Christmas Tree Restrictions

All restrictions to limit or restrict importation of cut fir trees into Canadian cities have been cancelled, it was announced by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. This means that the anticipated shortage of Christmas trees will not take place.

Prices Set On Graded Eggs

Price differentials in the grades of eggs have been established by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board effective from the present to the end of January 1943.

For Calgary and Edmonton, as centres of distribution the maximum price of Grade A large was recently pegged at 47 cents a dozen.

The price differential now sets grade A medium as at least 2 cents below grade A large will be 47 cents a dozen, pullets at least 5 cents below, or 42 cents a dozen, grade B, eight cents a dozen less or 39 cents a dozen, and grade C as 10 cents less or 37 cents a dozen.

Premium eggs may not sell for more than 4 cents a dozen over the maximum for Grade A large.

For cartoning, the dealer may charge an additional two cents a dozen for his eggs.

EFFECTIVE NOW

Prices of
TEA, COFFEE
AND
are reduced by law!

This action is taken in line with the Government's declared determination to stabilize living costs on a basis that is fair to all. It is a developing attack on the menace of inflation which arises out of wartime conditions. The prices of tea, coffee and oranges are now lowered by official order. Plans for reduction in the price of milk to the consumer are also under way and will be announced in the near future. The items chosen have been selected because of their important place in the weekly budget of every home in Canada.

TEA and COFFEE Effective now—the retail price of tea is reduced by 10c per pound and the retail price of coffee by 4c per pound below the recent lawful ceiling prices.

The table below indicates how the reduction of 10c per pound applies to less-than-pound packages; and is for purposes of illustration only.

Tea formerly selling by the pound at	$1.00	90c	85c
Must now sell at
per pound	90c	80c	75c
per 1-2 pound	45c	40c	38c
per 1-4 pound	24c	22c	21c
per 1-8 pound	13c	12c	11c

BULK TEA

The reduction in the maximum retail prices of bulk tea sold in quantities less than a pound should correspond to the reduction in retail prices for the small sizes of packaged tea.

TEA BAGS

Reductions in retail prices of tea packaged in tea bags must correspond to those made on packaged tea.

ORANGES Oranges must be reduced to give consumers the benefit of the reduction in cost to retailers brought about by lower prices for the new crop, by seasonal removal of import duty (effective December 1st, this year) and by the removal of the War Exchange Tax. Oranges should sell at or below the September-October 1941 retail price levels.

BE SURE THAT YOU GET THE FULL BENEFIT OF THESE REDUCTIONSSPECIAL NOTICE TO RETAILERS:

Retailers will be compensated for any loss on present stocks—in order that these reductions may be enjoyed by the public immediately. Retailers should take inventory of their floor stocks of tea and coffee as of the close of business, Saturday, December 5th. They will shortly receive forms upon which to make their claims for compensation for losses on inventory due to these price reductions.

Death waves a beckoning finger at the motorist who tries to beat the train to the railway crossing, and the engineer, whose train can't swerve or dodge, is helpless to avert the impending tragedy. Trying to beat the train to the crossing is still one of the most prevalent causes of crossing accidents, of which 219 occurred during the first eight months of 1942, exactly the same figure as for the corresponding period of 1941. Human folly is still responsible for nearly all of these accidents.

Shipbuilding Program

Canada Names Cargo Boats After Old Ports

Proud of a shipbuilding program which envisages the ultimate production of 300 10,000-ton cargo boats, Canada is giving to these vessels the names of forts renowned for their part in the Dominion's pioneer history.

With more than 60 ships delivered by Wartime Merchant Shipping Limited, a Government-owned company which operates under the Department of Munitions and Supply, many names long buried in the past are once more making history. Fort Ville Marie, Fort Nipigon, and Fort Louisbourg recall early colonial battles. Fort Chambly still guards the rapids of the Richelieu river. Fort Churchill, Fort Qu'Appelle, and Fort Good Hope were centres of the fur trade.

In addition to the 10,000-ton vessels, Canada is also building 18 boats of 5,000 tons deadweight capacity. Some of these ships bear the names of army camps, such as Camp Valcartier, while others are named after national parks, such as Banff and Jasper. —Ottawa Journal.

A Word For England

Troops Headed By A British General Turns The Tables

It has become quite the fashion in this country to laud General Rommel as the outstanding military leader of the war, yet the quiet and undramatic General Montgomery has achieved a victory such as Field Marshal Rommel never did. He has dislodged a powerful and elite force from a strongly defended position and hurled back that force in complete rout.

England it was that in the dark days after Dunkerque held the fort against Hitler until America could get ready and Russia could get into the war. England it was that outfought the Germans in the air when the invasion of the British Isles seemed imminent.

Now that the turning point seems to have come in the war, it is England's troops, headed by a British general, who have turned the table.

This is indeed England's day.—Watertown, N.Y., Times.

CHAPTER VIII

Anne returned to Halfway House shortly after midnight and found the guests gathered on the side veranda to watch the spectacle. The fire was at the far end of the lake, five miles away, yet it seemed very near. They could see a wall of flame, crackling roar of sound carried to them on a steady breeze, and the acrid smell of smoke was in the air they breathed. There was an awareness of danger, noticeably, the blaze was working southward toward the hotel.

Anne tried to reassure the others, telling them that the blaze had been discovered in time and that it was already being fought. She wanted them to believe they were in no danger at Halfway House.

"How relieving to know we're safe. I suppose your ranger friends are fighting the fire for us like heroes," Rhea Marshall said.

"I wouldn't say they are doing it for us. I assume they are mostly concerned with saving the timber. They know we can leave if necessary."

"I'd rather think they were being heroes for us," said the dark girl. Her eyes had a sultry look.

"Wouldn't you, Miss Lowry?" Anne smiled, saying nothing. She was unable to understand the girl's veiled sarcasm or her deliberate reference to the rangers. It was Rhea's aunt, Mrs. Leland, who answered.

"Draw in those claws, Rhea," she said sharply. "You're too good at being catty. You have Miss Lowry at a disadvantage."

Rhea said "Sorry" with a narrowing look at Anne. She moved languidly to the doorway. She made a picture; she was in a white evening dress skillfully relieved by a here-and-there touch of red, and wore her beauty with a casualness. In the doorway she paused, slowly faced about. Her voice still had that velvet-covered barb.

"By the way," she said, "where is Mr. Blake? I haven't seen him about since dinner."

Her manner made it appear that she spoke to the gathering, but her glance rested on Anne. Then, without awaiting an answer, she turned and went inside. Anne watched her cross the lobby and mount the stairs, knowing now that the girl had heard that conversation between Jud and her. More, Rhea seemed to know what that conversation had meant—and wanted Anne to know she knew. Erich's secret wasn't a secret any longer. Anne was frightened. She went inside to find her father. Drew Lowry was resting in the office off the lobby.

"Erich?" he said, in reply to her question. "I really don't know where he is. I haven't seen him about all evening." His pale, tired face showed concern. "You don't think he has left?"

And Anne said, "I almost hope he has. Yes, I do hope he has."

The fire burned on. Men converged upon the Indian Lake watershed from lumber camp and town, from mountain cabin and ranch. It was 3 o'clock when Erich Kruger showed up. Anne was switching off the lobby lights when he entered.

His face and hands were smoke blackened, his clothes were soiled and torn, and somewhere he had lost coat and tie. His eyes were red-rimmed, and he looked physically all in as he sank into a chair. Anne saw him smile; she did not return it.

"Erich, where have you been?" "To the fire, Anne. I have been working like a machine."

"You were there helping?"

"Yes. Don't look so surprised."

Anne wasn't surprised. She knew if her face showed anything it was alarm. "You shouldn't have been there," she said. "Not among all those men. The rangers—"

Erich made a weary gesture. "They were too busy to notice me. They asked no questions."

"Erich, there are people who know about you," she said.

"Ah, your Steve Hayes has found out. You went to him tonight, against my wishes, and you told him about me."

"That isn't true, Erich. But there is a man who saw you hide in the station wagon that night in Sand Flat. A disreputable man named Jud. He came here tonight, and I had to pay him to not go to the sheriff."

Erich no longer slumped in the chair. He sat erect, his hands gripped the chair arms, and his begrimed face had a stiff look.

"He will not tell so long as you pay him," he said. "But he will want to be paid over and over, and I cannot have you paying blackmail for me. I shall go away, Anne. If I leave tonight, the fire will help cover my going. All the men in the countryside are at the fire."

"Erich, they'll catch you. . . . You'll not get far."

He rose and faced her, his reddened eyes looking at her in a wistful way. "You worry for me?" he asked. Then, at once: "It is useless to say it, but I would like you to know, Anne, that I would be honored to have you as my wife. If your love for this Steve Hayes should—"

"Don't, please, Erich," she interrupted him.

He smiled thinly. "I shall make for Venezuela after Mexico," he said. "You will find me at Caracas, if you search for me." He moved slowly across the darkened lobby. At the stairs he paused. "I am dead on my feet," he said. "I think I must sleep a few hours before I start." And he went heavily up the stairs. . . .

They talked it over in the morning, the three of them—Erich and Anne and her father. Erich's stubborn mind was made up; he would try to reach friends in Mexico, and no amount of argument would deter him.

Her father put his hand on Erich's shoulder. "Erich, haven't you thought of all I've said? Can't you see that in a way it isn't playing the game fair to attempt to escape? If you believed in what you fought for, escape might be a part of the battle. But you—"

Erich shook off the older man's hand. "I am not a believer in playing the game fair," he said curtly. "That is a stupid belief of your English friends. I mean to play my way—and play for myself!"

"You refuse my advice, then?" "Absolutely, Herr Lowry. If you resent it, perhaps you will send for the police."

"Erich, Erich!" Anne said. "Don't talk like that, after we've tried to be your friends. We cannot help it if we do not see matters as you do."

But his sudden anger was beyond her appeasement. His face was flushed, seemingly more square-cut than ever, and his eyes were coldly blazing. Stiffly, he said, "I appreciate your friendliness. But I cannot accept your advice. I mean to leave at once."

"Erich, for your own sake I think it would be best if we sent for the police," she said. And she saw that make hurt replace the anger in his eyes. "Oh, Erich, think it over. At least you must wait until tonight. Please, Erich."

Slowly the stiffness went out of him. "Very well, Anne. What you ask, I cannot refuse. But—tonight I go."

Smoke still wafted skyward in black puffs from the burned timber, but the fire was out, and the afternoon brought rain in a steady downpour, which ended all danger of the blaze breaking out again.

The rain kept the people at Halfway House indoors all Sunday; all but Rhea Marshall, who ventured out in her smart yellow car during the afternoon. Something had worked a change in the girl; she seemed to have a sudden case of nerves.

Anne was aware of three guests that evening who appeared restless and on edge. The bored and displeased-looking Margaret Leland played bridge, but she also kept watching her niece in a close and frowning way. Rhea Marshall, Anne saw, sat curled up on a settee by a window, staring out through the rain-splattered panes. That it was too dark for her to see outside apparently mattered not at all; Rhea was merely staring moodily into space. The third person taking no part in the card playing or conversation was Erich Kruger. He sat slumped in an armchair, smoking cigarette after cigarette, chain-fashion, and his broad square face was grim.

Steve Hayes arrived shortly before 10 o'clock. Anne went to admit him when she heard his car drive up. Steve took off raincoat and campaign hat, tossed them into a chair, then turned and took her in his arms. They were alone in the lobby. He kissed her.

He said, "I'm late, honey, but it couldn't be helped. We turned up something at the fire last night. It was incendiary—deliberately set. We found evidence that can't be doubted."

Anne said, "But who would set fire—?" And she instantly thought she knew. The belief was so sudden it had an impact that took her breath away. She felt cold with fright. Erich, her father had told her and Rhea Marshall had hinted, had been away from Halfway House all last evening. She could remember Erich saying, when he returned, that the fire could cover his escape. Her face must have shown horror, for Steve put his arm about her.

"It's as bad as that," he said. "I've been working on it all day, and I'm plenty tired. Do you think you could give me a drink?"

"Certainly, Steve. Come into the lounge."

They went to the little bar, and she mixed him a cocktail. From the corner of her eyes she saw Erich across the room watching Steve with a dark intension. She also saw Rhea Marshall come up to the bar.

Rhea said, "Could I have a martini, Miss Lowry? A dry one?" Her voice was soft, but husky as with some strange emotion. She had approached from behind Steve, but her voice brought him swinging about. Anne could not see Steve's face then, his broad back being toward her, but she did see the way Rhea Marshall looked at him with a bright look in her eyes and a slow smile touching her lips. And she didn't like that. There was a moment of quiet that was static. Anne felt that she had to say something.

She said, "Miss Marshall, this is Mr. Hayes."

And the dark-haired girl softly said, "An introduction really isn't necessary, Miss Lowry. Mr. Hayes and I know one another—very well. You see, I happen to be Mrs. Steve Hayes."

SMILE AWHILE

Proud Mother—They promoted my son Jerry for hitting the sergeant. They made him a Court Marshal.

Elderly Lady (in plane)—Why so nervous and pale, my boy?

Pilot (despairingly)—We have lost both wings.

Elderly Lady (reassuringly)—Well, don't worry about that. We'll get new ones as soon as we land.

Jaggs (boasting)—When I roll home in the early hours of the morning my wife doesn't mind a scrap!

Jiggs (sorrowfully)—Neither does mine; in fact, she waits up for it.

"He was kicked out of school for cheating."

"How did it happen?"

"He was caught counting his ribs in a physiology examination."

Mrs. Tiltmore—You're not keeping to the diet the doctor prescribed.

Mrs. Hefty—What? Do you think I'm going to starve myself to death just so I can live a few years longer?

"My darling," wrote the A.R.P. warden to his evacuated wife, "I had a mishap the other night. I walked into a flooded dugout. I was absolutely soaked."

His wife replied in her next letter: "I'll bet you were."

THE BEST WAY WE'VE EVER TRIED IS ALL-BRAN'S "BETTER WAY"!

Says Mrs. George Morin, Grande-Baie, Quebec: "We have been users of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN for a long time . . . and for a good reason. ALL-BRAN, besides being a most delicious cereal, really does keep us regular . . . naturally." Why don't you try ALL-BRAN'S "Better Way" to correct the cause if you're troubled by constipation due to lack of the right kind of "bulk" in your diet? But remember, ALL-BRAN doesn't work like cathartics. It takes time. Eat it regularly and drink plenty of water. Get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's, in two convenient size packages, or ask for the individual serving package at restaurants. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Piano Recital

A crowded house greeted the pupils of Mrs. R. A. Gulliver, when they put on a recital in Knox United Church on Monday evening, November 30. All were amply rewarded for attending. From the tiny tots to the older pupils, everyone gave an excellent account of themselves, and were a credit to their teacher. Master Jimmy Quinton of Calgary, was a guest artist, and gave several selections on the violin which were much enjoyed by the audience.

The pupils taking part were: Anita Andrews, Marlyn and Mildred Befus, Marjorie Clarke, Muriel and Lucille Collinge, Gweneth Dainty, Verna Feeg, Loraine Fischer, Florence and Gordon Gilson, Bonny Hallman, Doreen and Marion Holmes, Betty and Raymond Johnson, Dionne and Jean Kreuger, Jackie and Lindy McFarquhar, Murray McLaughlin, Alta May and Edward Oke, Jean Reist, Loretta Reiffenstein, Doreen, Willy and Jean Rennie, Betty Rupp, Ellen Schmidt, Pauline Westfall, Veleta Watkin and Cameron and Douglas Wordie.

Weddings.

YODER-SHANTZ

A very pretty wedding took place on the afternoon of Thursday, December 3, at 3 p.m., in the West Zion Mennonite Church west of Carstairs, when Edna Viola, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Shantz of Didsbury, became the bride of Mr. Rollin Joseph Yoder of Carstairs, son of Mrs. C. D. Yoder of Windom, Kansas.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dress of white satin back crepe, and carried a bouquet of American Beauty Reses. Her bridesmaid was Miss Vera Yoder of Windom, Kansas, sister of the groom. She wore a frock of dusty pink silk jersey and carried a bouquet of cream and pink carnations.

Mr. Royden Shantz, cousin of the bride, acted as best man. Mr. H. J. Harder of Didsbury, performed the ceremony.

Just preceding the ceremony, a duet "Love is Shining", was sung by Miss Mildred Traub and Mr. Alvin Steekly.

During the signing of the register, Miss Mildred Traub sang "O Perfect Love".

After the ceremony, a dinner was served to about sixty guests. Assisting, were the Misses Mildred Traub, Gladys Shantz, Alberta Shantz, Jean Snyder and Cicely Rogers.

The happy couple left for a short honeymoon in Calgary.

CUMMINS - WILSON

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. J. Cummins of Didsbury, at four o'clock, December 4, when her second daughter, Anne Elizabeth was united in marriage to Cpl. James Loudon Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Wilson of Carlsland. The Rev. J. M. Fawcett officiated.

To the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus played by Mrs. Crimmon, the bride entered the drawing room on the arm of her brother, Mr. Jack Cummins, and looked charming in an afternoon frock of Queen's blue. She wore a corsage of Talisman roses and was attended by her sister, Miss Joyce Cummins, attired in a redingote dress of gold and black and wearing a corsage of yellow roses. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Frank Wilson of Carlsland.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore an ensemble of navy blue, while the groom's mother chose a frock of black sheer.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held for twenty guests. Assisting in the serving were Mrs. W. Devolin, sister of the bride, Mrs. John Kimmel and Miss Vivian Williamson of Calgary.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left by motor for points south and upon their return, Mrs. Wilson will continue teaching, while the groom will leave shortly to resume his duties at Camp Borden, Ontario.

Cards of Thanks

We take this means to thank our many friends and neighbors for their kind help and sympathy during the illness and death of our beloved husband and father.
